Will people ever get along?

Research by Associate Professor Mark Huglen, Ph.D., examines how we can improve human relationships through self-revision. When we immerse ourselves in other communities, actively engage with them and open ourselves to being revised by them, we have an opportunity to reduce conflict, war, separation and strained relationships. Through self-revision we learn to invent and reinvent ourselves and each other.